LIGHT VOTE IN PRIMARY SEEN

Some Confusion May Be Expected As Result Of Re-Precincting County

El Dorado County's participation in the presidential primary on Tuesday, May 7th, may be marked by some confusion resulting from the re-precincting of the county during the past year and County Clerk Arthur J. Koletzke announced on Wednesday that he will be at his office all day on Election Day for the convenience of election officials and the public generally.

A light vote is expected.

The only registered electors eligible to vote are those who recorded themselves as affiliated with either the Democratic or the Republican parties, since other parties failed to qualify tickets for the election. In El Dorado County there are 4,936 Democrats and 2,595 Republicans registered and qualified to vote in the election.

Democrats have a choice of four tickets, as will appear on the ballot. The Republicans have only one ticket.

Within the past ten days, electors have received sample ballots by mail from the county clerk, and with them a card telling where the polling place in the elector's precinct will be established.

These cards should be saved and (Continued on Page Four)

When A Grateful State Remembered

On May 3, 1890, at Coloma

UNVEILING OF THE MARSHALL MONUMENT TOOK PLACE at Coloma fifty years ago this week, in public exercises opening at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of May 3, 1890. The above picture, loaned for reproduction by Mrs. Verna Brame, of the Hangtown Antique Shop, shows the scene. The Mountain Democrat for May 10, 1890, reports that "During the address by President Caminetti (of the monument commission) the large American flag that encompassed the monument and enshrouded the statue of Marshall, suddenly floated upon the breeze and to the ground, loosed from its place by the hand of little Farley Drew Caminetti, the five-year-old son of the speaker, and by his act the unveiling and dedication of the state was a thing of the past." Inset above, George Hofmeister, only surviving member of the Marshall Monument Commission. Inset below, the monument as seen today.

History Of Marshall Monument Began In Placerville Parlor

Land For Site, Formerly Owned By Discoverer Of Gold, Was Acquired By Native Sons And Presented To State; Shaft Of Native Stone

By GEORGE HOFMEISTER

(Ed. Note—In calling attention to the fiftieth anniversary of the unveiling of the James W. Marshall monument at Coloma, on May 3, 1890, we are privileged to present a brief history of the project by Mr. Hofmeister, now resident at Oakland, who is the only surviving member of the Marshall Monument Commission, under whose direction the monument was erected by the State of California. Mr. Hofmeister is the only surviving charter member of Placerville Parlor No. 9, Native Sons of the Golden West and was, as he reveals in this article, the one who first proposed that such a monument be erected.)

The discovery of gold at Coloma in January, 1848 by James W. Marshall, is without doubt, one of the outstanding events connected with the early history of California.

There is no need to give Marshall's biography beyond the statement that he was a native of New Jersey, born in the year of 1812 and died in Kelsey, August 10th, 1885. His expressed desire to be buried on the site of his former home in Coloma, was carried out, and it is on this spot that the monument to his memory was erected.

Shortly after Marshall's passing, a resolution was introduced and acted favorably thereon by Placerville Parlor No. 9, N. S. G. W., to appoint a committee to draw up a memorial to the various Parlor of the State, asking for subscriptions and stating the purpose, to erect a suitable monument to the discovery (Continued on page two)

SRA Camp Hopes To Get Piano For Recreation

Frank Conner, recreation director at Camp El Dorado, reports that the men of the camp are hopeful of acquiring a piano for their recreational hall. They have formed a purse containing a nominal sum and hope that it may be sufficient to assist them in getting an instrument.

Mr. Conner, who may be addressed by mail at P. O. Box Q, Placerville, or reached by telephone at 42-F-2, asks that anyone who can suggest a solution of the problem, or anyone who has used magazines or newspapers which they will contribute to the camp, communicate with him.

El Doradoans: Are You In Census?

The census enumeration for this district is nearing a conclusion and in the face of reports from several residents that they have not been interviewed by the census takers, the Chamber of Commerce has volunteered to be a headquarters for such reports.

If those who have not been interviewed by the census takers will report to the Chamber of Commerce (Telephone 471) the matter will be called to the attention of the Census Supervisor, whose headquarters are at Roseville.

This co-operation is in the interest of securing the most complete possible census enumeration for El Dorado County.

COUNTY PICNIC ON SATURDAY

Music Festival During Forenoon; Athletics Following Luncheon

El Dorado County's annual "May Day" picnic will be held Saturday at the county fair grounds featuring the unusual attraction this year of a music festival in which virtually all schools of the county will be represented.

This part of the program will occupy the forenoon, opening at 9 o'clock in the morning and continuing until noon, under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Wiley, county school music supervisor.

It is announced that in the event of inclement weather, the music festival will be presented in the high school auditorium starting at nine o'clock Saturday morning.

Participants in the festival are to meet at the picnic site Friday afternoon for a final rehearsal.

Following luncheon, a grammar school track meet will be called at 1:30 o'clock with races and other contests for girls and boys, and this will be followed by a series of baseball games for boys and softball games for girls.

The plans for the day will follow those in effect last year in that those who attend will be expected to have made provision for their own picnic lunches.

The general chairman for the day is Kenneth W. McCoy, county school superintendent. Mrs. Wiley has arranged the music festival with the assistance of teachers of the county and Mr. McCoy will be assisted in the management of the picnic by High School Principal B. E. Larson, Grammar School Superintendent John H. Palmer, A. H. Murray, John Winkelman and L. R. Armes.

Water Rates Hearing Set

Georgetown Matter Will Be Aired In Placerville On Next Wednesday, May 8th

We have word officially from the state railroad commission that a public hearing will be held in Placerville on Wednesday, May 8th, at ten o'clock in the morning at the courthouse, in the matter of the application of the Georgetown Divide Water Company, Ltd., for an increase in its water rates.

This is a matter of vital concern to the residents of the North Side who will, it is presumed, take advantage of the opportunity afforded them to present at the hearing some expression of opinion concerning the subject of the hearing.

Word from the railroad commission seems to indicate that this is a proceeding separate and apart from the series of hearings which the commission has been holding for the past year relative to the North Side water situation, although of course the matters are very closely related.

and the discoverer. Due to the fact that at the time the organization was limited in numbers as well as finances, the responses while favorable to the plan, were not sufficient to carry on Jane Hall, girl detective, is summoned to the home of Emory Harding on Skeleton Island, off the coast of Maine, to guard his daughter Audrey, whose life has been threatened in a letter, typewritten in red, demanding that Harding relinquish a valuable ruby he bought from an old sea captain, Albert Santrey. He also sends for his friend, Bruce Kirby, young scientist. Shortly afterward, one of the servants, Drumm, finds Santrey dead on the beach. It is found that he died from a deadly snake's venom injected with a hypodermic needle. Other guests in the house are Dr. Toler, snake specialist, who admits that he has a tube of the venom; Frank Bitherbee, Audrey's fiancé; Dr. Straater and his wife; Robert Castian and his wife; and a Madame Leroux. It is recognized that murder has been committed, and Jane takes charge.

CHAPTER IX
JANE caught the twinkle in Kirby's eyes and flushed. Then she regained her composure and rose.

"Where was Santrey found, and by whom?" she began her inquiry.

"Down at the cove where Benet and I came in with him from the plane," said Kirby. "Drumm found him."

"When was he found?"

"Half an hour after you and I both arrived."

"Half an hour!" Jane puckered her lips. "Six to six-thirty, eh? Quick work. Any clues on the spot?"

"That's not so, Kirby," said Bitherbee. "You recall. We found those footprints. The ones that looked as though a lame man had made them."

"Oh, yes—I'd forgotten," said Kirby, grudgingly.

DR. TOLER rose and glared across the table at Bitherbee. "What did you say?" he rasped.

"We found footprints that looked as though—" Bitherbee broke off as a quick thought brightened his eyes. "Kirby, it's Toler's lame!"

"Are you just realizing that?" Kirby seemed annoyed.

"But he—"

"Wait a second," said Jane, tapping a glass for quiet. She looked at Toler. "Were you down on the beach tonight?"

"No."

"Are you sure?"

"Himmell! of course I am sure!" Toler replied sharply. "I was not near the beach!"

"You can prove that?"

"From six to six-thirty. I was in my room, Fraulein. I came downstairs after I met Mr. Bitherbee taking Audrey to her room. He said something was wrong."

"That's right," said Bitherbee, nodding. "But those prints don't lie. And there is no one else here who limps."

idly on both feet, his good leg digging deep. But a man trying to make prints look like those of a lame man would walk on the toe of one foot to give himself an uneven gait.

"That's so!" Jane Hall wrinkled her nose. "Bright child, Bruce. Some one, by means of a limp and snake venom, is trying to throw this thing on Dr. Toler."

"Or else Dr. Toler is cleverly trying to throw it on himself to avert suspicion," said Kirby easily.

"Take it easy," said Kirby. "If you're innocent, you've nothing to fear, have you?"

The herpetologist subsided, muttering darkly.

AT THAT moment, the door opened, and Frank Bitherbee re-entered the room.

"Drumm's not home," he said. "His wife thinks he went down to the cove to look around."

"I'll get him," said Kirby, rising. "No," said Jane. "I want you here, Bruce. She turned to Bitherbee. "Do you mind?"

Bitherbee didn't seem particularly keen to go, but he smiled and replied "Not at all." Then he patted Audrey's shoulder. "I'll be right back, darling."

Audrey was frightened. "Don't go, Frank!"

"It's perfectly all right," he said. "I'll take care."

He went out again, closing the door after him.

Before Jane could resume her inquiry, Madame Leroux rose languidly and patted Harding on the cheek.

"Come, mon enfant—I am weary of this dull inquest! Let us go into the other room."

Almost as though her words were a prearranged signal, the others pushed back their chairs and rose. Harding opened the sliding doors to the living room and they filed into it.

BRUCE and Jane, however, remained at the table.

"I think you're hateful!" Jane glowered. "You might have told me something was wrong!"

"I didn't for good cause," said Kirby. "I didn't want you made a cynosure. You are now I hope you realize. My purpose was to keep your identity secret from the murderer."

"You believe it's one of them?"

"Which one?"

Kirby shrugged. "Your guess is as good as mine. I wish you hadn't told them who you are, Jane. I'm worried about your safety now."

"I can take care of myself," she said. "After all, Bruce, I've been chasing killers for months now and have survived—"

Just then, they both heard a shout from somewhere outside. Kirby leaped up and dashed out into the hall just as the front door opened.

FRANK BITHERBEE burst into the house, his cheeks flushed from running, his tuxedo trousers white with sand dust.

"Kirby!" he panted. "It's Drumm—" He gasped for breath.

Kirby seized him by the shoulder. "What about Drumm? What's happened?"

"Down by the cove," said Bitherbee breathlessly.

Jane, who had followed Kirby into the hall, uttered a sharp exclamation.

"You mean Drumm's dead?" Kirby said tersely.

Bitherbee nodded, his eyes strangely glazed.

"Right where we found Santrey. He's been shot through the head!"

as we had hoped and finally after all other resources were exhausted, the matter was carried to the Grand Parlor. There it was decided that as the state had profited most by the discovery, it would be no more than right that the state should stand the cost.

At a subsequent meeting of the State Legislature a bill was introduced and passed appropriating $5,000 and providing for the appointment of a commission—the original members of which were, A. Caminetti, H. C. Gesford and J. H. Miller.

Judge Gesford for very good reasons shortly afterward resigned and asked that a member of Placerville Parlor, which had pioneered the movement, be appointed in his stead. Placerville Parlor submitted the name of George Hofmeister, who was the originator of the idea and whom Gov. Waterman appointed to fill the vacancy.

In the meantime Placerville Parlor acquired the title to the property formerly owned by Marshall, which had previously passed into other hands, and donated the same to the state.

Sometime later the commissioners met and organized in Sacramento, and as a result Caminetti was selected as chairman; Miller, secretary; and Hofmeister, on account of his residence near the site, was chosen as superintendent. It was decided to call for plans or rather designs and at a later meeting that design submitted by J. Marion Wells, a sculptor residing in Berkeley, was selected as being the most appropriate and he was awarded the contract.

The monument was erected on a prominent hill overlooking Coloma and the original site of Sutter's Mill; it was constructed from some of the natural rocks of the vicinity, granite and a species of chalkstone and is surmounted by a figure representing Marshall made of alloyed metals. The entire height of the structure exceeds 40 feet.

On the four sides cut in stone are given the dates of the birth and death of Marshall; the date of the discovery, which matter is questionable; the donor of the site, Placerville Parlor, N. S. G. W. and the names of the commissioners.

Due to the patriotism and sincerity of those in whom the work of placing this memorial was entrusted, all moneys were intelligently disbursed exclusively for the purpose intended.

LUNCHES MAY BE GIVEN IN CONNECTION WITH SWIM COURSE

According to T. S. Marlor, chairman of the county Red Cross chapter, he has "a practical commitment" from the Bureau of Community Distribution to undertake to provide food for the distribution of lunches to children attending Red Cross swimming classes to be formed this year at the Placerville plunge.

Mr. Marlor pointed out to the bureau that the demands for supplies by the schools of the county who are participating in the bureau's work, would cease at the close of school and suggested commodities might be supplied to the Red Cross swim school instead.

In view of the apparent possibility of favorable action by the bureau, the Red Cross chairman has made application to the city for leave to use the Junior Community Hall as a headquarters for the luncheon distribution.

TAHOE GREYHOUND LINES START RUN TO LAKE ON MAY 25TH

Whoever reported that the Tahoe Greyhound Lines would start service to Lake Tahoe for the summer season on April 25th—and it seems that we did it—was in error.

Agent Joe Heinz told us about the fifteenth of April that Lake Tahoe service would start on "the 25th", and it was presumed he meant April 25th.

We regret to report that the Tahoe Greyhound Lines will not begin to deliver recreationists to the shores of that charmed "Lake of the Skies" until May 25th.

Sonja Henie Answers "No," "No" And "No"

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Sonja Henie reported today that the answers to all the rumors concerning her romance, her figure, and her fortune add up to "no," and the louder it's shouted, the better.

"HERE COMES THE PRINCE" TO BE GIVEN TONIGHT BY CLUB DRAMATISTS

Members of the Shakespeare drama section will present "Here Comes the Prince," their second drama offering of the season, at the Shakespeare clubhouse on Thursday night, May 2.

It is estimated that there are, over all, enough laughs, hilariously funny situations, excitement, and romance to satisfy the most critical ones. For, when Terry isn't upsetting Carol's carefully laid plans, the Professor becomes a disturbing factor or Winks, a devil with the ladies, adds his bit to the merriment of the play. Then there is that adorable Granny who in her sly way rules her family with a firm hand and seems to make them like it.

Members of the cast are: Fred Halliday, Paul Sweikar; Carol, his daughter, Mary Forni; his niece, Joan, Evelyn Brander; his mother, Granny Halliday, Patricia Crosland; Professor Chipper, Paul Hunter; Terry Donovan, Al Bryan; Mrs. Leboyer and her daughter, Ovieda LeBourveau and Reba Sinclair; Sonja, Lorene Roberts; Winks, Loren Atwood, and Prince Rudolph of Zenobia, Richard Barry.

Dr. Mildred Thoren, Director of the Sanatorium, expressed her appreciation of the work of the group and emphasized the psychological aspect of the treatment of tuberculosis that will be served by the planned program of adult education.

The El Dorado County Tuberculosis Association as well as those of the other thirteen counties, have contributed a sum in proportion to the number of their patients hospitalized, which will finance the work for the first year after which the responsibility will be assumed by the Board of Education of Placer County.

ALLIES WITHDRAW FROM CENTRAL NORWAY; RUMANIA TROUBLED

Central Norway today and Great Britain rushed precautions against a German blow in the Mediterranean, the Balkans, Holland or even an aerial blitzkrieg against the British Isles.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, a gaunt, grave figure standing before the House of Commons in London, told the British that they had lost the first phase of the Scandinavian war against superior enemy land, artillery and aerial forces but that the fight would go on on all fronts with increased vigor.

The Prime Minister said that: The battered and defeated British and French expeditionary forces had been withdrawn from its base at the Norwegian port of Andalsnes, south of Trondheim, without loss, despite operations of the German air fleet.

The war in the north will be carried on with full force, presumably from positions north of Trondheim where the Allies are pouring reinforcements into the Steinkjer sector.

The British and French battle fleet is in the eastern Mediterranean, as an apparent precaution against entry of Italy into the war on the side of Germany, and the Allies are prepared for possible German drives into southeastern Europe, Holland or by air against the British Isles.

Chamberlain made no mention of Allied losses in Central Norway and disclosed nothing regarding operations north of Trondheim or in the far northern Norwegian port of Narvik, where an isolated enemy force still holds out.
